8 Domains of Livability

According to AARP, there are 8 essential domains to creating livable communities which allow the full inclusion and participation of residents of all ages and abilities.

More Info:

Respect and Social Inclusion
Everyone wants to feel valued. Intergenerational activities are a great way for young and old to learn from one another, honor what each has to offer and, at the same time, feel good about themselves.

Work & Civic Engagement
Why does work need to be an all or nothing experience? An age-friendly community provides ways older people can continue to work for pay, volunteer their skills and be actively engaged in community life. (If they choose)

Communication and Information
Age-friendly communities recognize that not everyone has a smartphone or Internet access and that information needs to be disseminated through a variety of means.

Community and Health Services
At some point, every person of every age gets hurt, becomes ill or simply needs some help. While it’s important that care be available nearby, it’s essential that residents are able to access and afford the services required.

Outdoor Spaces and Buildings
People need public places to gather — indoors and out. Green spaces, safe streets, sidewalks, outdoor seating and accessible buildings can be used and enjoyed by people of all ages. (think elevators, stairs with railings, etc.)

Transportation
Driving shouldn’t be the only way to get around. Public transit options can be as expansive and as infrastructure dependent as a train system or as targeted as a taxi service that provides non-drivers with rides to and from a doctor’s office.

Housing
Most people want to remain in their own home and community as they age. Doing so is possible if housing is designed or modified for aging in place and a community has affordable housing options for varying life stages.

Social Participation
Regardless of a person’s age, loneliness is often as debilitating a health condition as having a chronic illness or disease. Sadness and isolation can be combatted by the availability of accessible, affordable and fun social activities.
